

END OF NATIONAL CAMPAIGN BETS AND FORECASTS IN THE LOCAL CAMPAIGN

DEMOCRATS ON HAWAII CONCEDE KUHIO'S ELECTION AND REPUBLICAN LEGISLATORS

The Hawaii Herald, Democratic, this week contains the following:

"All reports coming to this city from Kau and Kona seem to show that Delegate Kuhio will receive a good majority there, which will be a great change from the vote of two years ago. Both Home Rulers and Democrats seem to have joined the column of Kuhio supporters, as the result of the work done in Congress on the land law. When Kuhio was in Kau two years ago he made a number of promises, which it was evidently thought he could not keep as he was beaten on that part of the island by McCandless. Since that time, however, he has proved that he was sincere, the promises made have been carried out and the sentiment seems to have changed.

"In the election of 1908 McCandless carried Pahala easily with 54 votes to Kuhio's 23, while Notley got but 11. In Waiohine two years ago McCandless had 67 votes to Notley's 55 and Kuhio's 43. The totals for Kau were: McCandless, 121; Kuhio, 66; Notley, 66. This year it seems likely that Not-ley's vote will be much smaller, his strength going to Kuhio and a forecast of the balloting in that section, coming from a man familiar with the situation and based on the same number of voters as last year gives Kuhio, 142; McCandless 996, and Notley, 41.

"For Representative it looks very much as though three men were certain of election, Affonso, Keolawa and Maunauli. The fourth is a question which is hard to decide and the fight will be a close one.

"For the Senate Hewitt seems to be conceded the first place. He has always been popular with the Hawaiians and now virtually has the entire Home Rule support, as Makekau has always been his friend and is not fighting against him, while J. G. Lewis, of Kohala, the Home Ruler, is advising his people to vote for Hewitt in place of Makekau. Lewis seems to have no chance of election and the fight for second place is apparently between Makekau and Fernandez, the latter's strength in Kona being of great assistance to him."

DELEGATE KUHIO BACK FROM HAWAII

Delegate Kalaniana'ole returned this morning on the Mauna Kea, from his final campaign tour of Hawaii. With him came various reports by mail and otherwise, of the condition of affairs on the big island, most of them indicating that Kuhio was safe to carry the island by a bigger vote than he had last time.

Col. McCarthy, chairman of the Democratic campaign committee, stated this morning, however, that he had received a letter which would startle the Republicans if shown to them. He said it was from a prominent Republican of Hawaii, and that it declared that Kuhio didn't have any chance at all on that island. "In the view of this man, who is well in touch with the situation, Kuhio hasn't even a 'look-in,'" said McCarthy. "If I were to give his name Republicans would be greatly surprised."

On the other hand, private advices of a confidential nature are very strongly the other way. A letter from a Democrat who has been a leader on Hawaii ever since the Democratic party was founded expresses the opinion that Kuhio will win on Hawaii, though conceding that McCandless may gain a bit over his vote of two years ago. The correspondence from Republican headquarters on Hawaii, shows the party campaign managers thoroughly confident. Detailed estimates, precinct by precinct, have been received, and these estimates, carefully studied out, indicate that McCandless will be buried this time.

Still another source of general inter-island information is the employees of the inter-island steamers. "From what we hear from our men who visit the many ports," said President Kennedy, of the Inter-Island company, "the Republicans generally seem to be safe as far as the delegate and the Territorial ticket are concerned. There will naturally be some mixed results on local tickets."

CLAIMS OF THE PARTY LEADERS ON THE MAINLAND

(Associated Press Cable to The Star.)

NEW YORK, November 5.—The end of the strenuous campaign in this state finds both sides claiming victory by large majorities. Democratic leaders predict the election of Dix for governor by a hundred thousand plurality, and they say that they expect to elect fourteen of the thirty-seven Congressmen from this state.

The Republican campaign committee has made a statement in which the election of Stimson for governor is predicted by 100,000, and confidence is expressed in the general success of the state and Congressional ticket.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5.—The Republican and Democratic leaders are each claiming a sweeping victory in California in the election of Tuesday. Hiram Johnston, insurgent Republican candidate for governor, has been making a whirlwind campaign as a progressive Republican and as an opponent of the Southern Pacific machine.

In giving their estimates today, both of the campaign committees claimed victory.

The betting is even in this city that Johnson will have a plurality of 20,000 in the entire state.

CHICAGO, Ill., November 5.—The Democratic Congressional campaign committee claims that it will carry the election in enough districts to give the Democrats a majority of 51 in the next House of Representatives.

The Republican Congressional committee's estimates are that the Republicans will retain a safe working majority in the House.

END-OF-THE-CAMPAIGN BETS AND FORECASTS OF EXPERTS

The end of the last week before election finds the Republicans more confident as to the delegateship and legislature than they have been since the campaign began, and the Democrats making a hard tussle locally for the county ticket. "I am afraid now that McCandless has even beaten Jarrett," admitted one Democrat who is himself a candidate. Up to a few days ago the Democrats felt that Jarrett and Rose were quite safe, but the defections from their party caused by McCandless policies and his action in bossing the convention have changed this.

Col. McCarthy, on the other hand, maintains an air of confidence. "If the election took place today," he said, "we should win out all along the line. I wish the voting was today, for if we can hold what we've got, we shall win."

The colonel says he hasn't had much to do as county campaign manager since he began to occupy the lid. Things were already so well organized he said, that all he had to do was to let them run on, which is a nice compliment to Rivenburgh.

McCandless is not so much in evidence around the Democratic headquarters since McCarthy was made chairman and manager. McCarthy being opposed to him, the situation is a somewhat delicate one. McCarthy is hammering away for the county ticket, but declines to approve Link.

The Democrats today are most hopeful for Jarrett and Rose, sheriff and deputy. Fern for mayor, Petrie and McClellan for supervisors, and some have hopes of funding three supervisors. Republicans do not now concede any of these, though the best judges admit that the chances of Jarrett, Rose and Petrie look pretty good. The Republicans are wondering which supervisor they are most likely to lose and are only sure that it won't be Eben Low. This makes a situation calling for hustling for the straight ticket voting, say the Republican campaigners, for if Petrie, and possibly McClellan, run ahead of their party ticket, the lowest man or men on the Republican ticket will be lost.

The Republican senatorial and most of the representative ticket are regarded as safe.

The betting so far has been even money and has been mostly confined to the offices of mayor and treasurer. Some considerable sums have been placed on Lane and Shingle as a combination, and separately. A hundred dollars offered, even money, on Lane during the week found no takers. No Democrats are to be found willing to place any bets on McCandless or the legislative ticket.

The Republican managers are finishing their work with every sign of confidence. "We are putting on the finishing touches now," said Chairman Atkinson, "and feel that we are at the end of a successful campaign, though we shall work hard to the very last, realizing that we have an active opposition."

W. C. Achi, who has been especially active in the Fifth District, makes the prediction of a clean sweep for the Republicans. Achi's longheadedness in Fifth district politics has been shown many times and puts him in the expert class.

BOTH LIKELY TO RECOVER

The two principals in yesterday's shooting affray in Fort street are still in hospital, but both are doing as well as can be expected. The bullets have not been extracted, as there is more danger in attempting an operation at this stage than there is in allowing the bullet to remain in the body at present. McQuaid is still in a serious condition, though he is doing nicely, but there is no danger to be apprehended in the case of Driver. Dr. Judd has charge of the patients and his report is favorable in both instances.

The car had to be abandoned, and the party got assistance to get to town.

FERREIRAS EXAMINED.

Domingo Ferreira's parents were at the Judiciary building this morning on account of their alleged connection with the smuggling of opium that has been going on, as they had been notified that they were to appear before Commissioner Davis for examination. They were cross-examined by District Attorney Breckons at some length, and eventually told to come up again on Wednesday morning at ten o'clock. This action on the part of Breckons raised the ire of the attorneys who had been retained, for they were not admitted to his office while the searching examination was being conducted.
